FIGURES

1.1. The Internet and World Wide Web As Communication Chameleons .................. 4
2.1. Information Technology and Cost Savings ................. 10
2.2. The Open University: Mother of Modern Distance Learning .................................. 13
2.3. Internet-Based Distance Learning: Today and Tomorrow .................................. 16
2.4. Is the Internet the Medium of Choice for Distance Learning? ............................ 18
2.5. The Internet As a Higher-Functionality, Lower-Cost Way to Deliver Video-on-Demand ........ 19
2.6. Internet Access at the Cost of Cable TV Connection .................................. 19
2.7. Near and Far: The Many Forms of Distance Learning .................................. 22
2.8. Does Distance Matter in Asynchronous Learning Environments? ......................... 23
2.9. Information Technology and Quality Learning .................................. 25
2.10. Online Superstar Teachers: Goodbye to the Merely Good? ............................ 27
2.11. Transforming Rebel! from an Isolated Application to a Web Distance-Learning Tool .................. 31
2.12. What It Might Take to Make CoVis Work .................................. 36
3.1. Scholar As Publisher: Making Research Directly Available to Readers Across the Internet .................................. 41
3.2. Providing Services to Manage Information in Digital Libraries .................................. 44
3.3. Bigger Is Better? .................................. 46
3.4. Higher Education’s Fight with New Electronic Copyright Laws........................................ 49
3.5. Who Wins: Publishers, Readers, Both, or Neither? ................................................. 50
3.6. Traditional Publishers and the Digital Enemy: Fight or Flight?................................. 51
3.7. Paper Publishing Elephants Following Digital Mice?.................................................. 52
3.8. The World Lecture Hall: Homepage Image................................................................. 54
3.9. Grassroots Developers and Traditional Publishers: A Marriage?................................. 57
4.1. Academic Technology-Planning Using Information Technologies.............................. 62
4.2. BioMedNet Homepage................................................................................................. 64
4.3. A Schematic of a Possible Information Environment to Support the Transition to Work ................................................................. 65
4.4. Athena University: A Familiar Organization in a New Medium?................................. 68
4.5. Globewide Network Academy: A New Organization in a New Medium?..................... 70
5.1. Microsoft OnLine Institute............................................................................................. 78
5.2. Higher Education Invades Corporate Training............................................................. 83
5.3. Auto U......................................................................................................................... 84