Special Award

“1909 – 2009, Centenary of the Nobel Prize to Guglielmo Marconi – Father of the Radio”

It all began towards the end of the 19th Century, when, in his father's house on the hills surrounding Bologna, a twenty-year-old young man began studying and experimenting in the field of physics and the propagation of electromagnetic waves.

Less than 15 years later, in December 1909, as a happy conclusion to an extraordinarily intense work program whereby he had publicly demonstrated his discoveries, Guglielmo Marconi was awarded the prestigious Nobel Prize “in recognition of his contribution to the development of wireless telegraphy”.

Wishing to celebrate that extraordinary event: Marconi, the first Italian ever to be given such prestigious award; the experiments carried out initially in Africa and then onboard of the yacht Elettra; his link with the Italian Navy for his service in the Royal Navy and so as to make his experience a model and a motivation for everyone, the Associazione Radioamatori Marinai Italiani – A.R.M.I., in cooperation with Associazione Radioamatori Italiani – A.R.I., Associazione Italiana Radioascolto – A.I.R. and Associazione Italiana Radio d'Epoca – A.I.R.E., has founded a special international award for all OM's and SWL's responding to the following rules.
