

LETTER TO FATHER CHRISTMAS

Dear Father Christmas, with mummy I have already sent you a letter with the gift list. But this year I have learn to write and I can write by myself!
Mummy let me list many gifts, but she says you cannot bring me more than one or two. Just remember that the most important of all is a little brother or sister. But I think that mummy is wrong, because my cousin Matthew receives every year more than two gifts, and he is certainly not as good as I am. It's unfair! So I want to tell you this: it's OK for me if you take me the same gifts as to my cousin, even not listed in the letter. Maybe it is easier for you. And that's okay if you deliver them a few days later or in advance. I understand that at Christmas you are so busy, and you're quite an old guy. By the way, how old are you? Old uncle Alfred says you have a white beard since he was a child. Isn't it time for you to retire, like any old guy do? By the way, you can come and stay a while with us if you want, if you retire or maybe when you are not too busy during the year. You could sleep with me in my room, and my mother cooks well. You would be a sort of grandfather for me, who have no more grandparents.
Is it okay? Then I'll wait for you at Christmas night. Or in advance, or later, if you prefer, but I'll wait for you.
