* could be

1. son of 'x sister (who married a Sugden), or
2. son of Martha's brother, if Martha was a Sugden, or
3. son of Martha's sister (who married a Sugden)

but as Jonas' second name was Sugden, it seems likely that Martha was a Sugden, and therefore solution [2]

Cockshott, Cockshot, Cockshoot, Cockshutt, Cotshott.—Local, 'of Cockshut,' a chapelry in the parish of Ellesmere, co. Salop. But there is strong evidence of the existence of another place of the same name in co. Lancashire or the W. Rid. of Yorks. Cōtshott is an American variant.

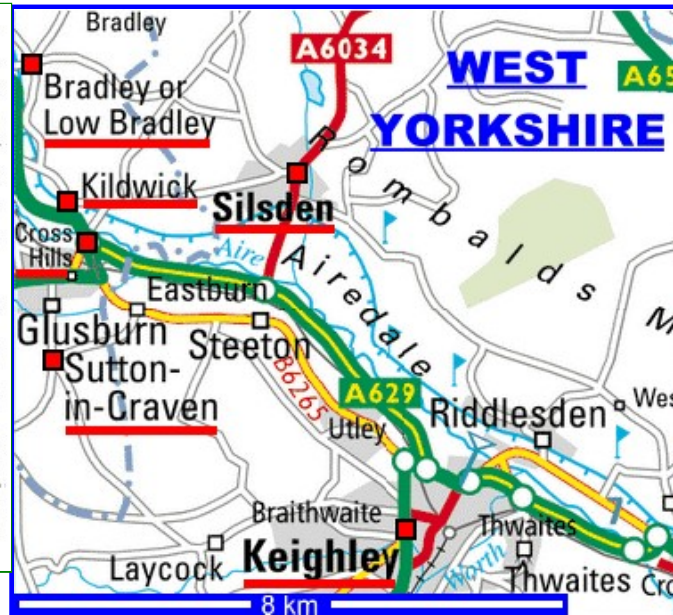

Edmund Cockshott, 1662: Preston Guild Rolls, p. 127.

Alice Cockshutt, of Padiham, widow, 1630: Wills at Chester (1621-50), p. 51.

Edward Cockshutt, of Walton-le-dale, 1628: ibid.

1794. Married — Thomas Cockshott and Eliz. Mason: St. Geo. Han. Sq. ii. 122.

- # there were several William Cockshotts born in Yorkshire 1770-1780, and none in Keighley, so there is no way of finding which is the right one
- * there were several William Cockshott's born in Yorkshire about 1808, but only one in Keighley, so we have to hope these are the right parents; we are now in the realm of conjecture however: Yorkshire was full of Cockshotts! When the 1841 census becomes available online, if William I is still alive then, we might find out more. Had William II got married after 1837, when national registration started, his marriage certificate would have shown his father's name, but his (church) marriage in 1829 (below) unfortunately just gives his wife's name
- there were too many Sugdens born in that period to find the correct one
